Jhongjiao Bay is located close to kilometer marker 39 of Provincial Highway 2. It has a crescent-shaped sand beach, and due to northern winds throughout the seasons, beautiful waves rolling in are a common sight. This is one of the best spots for surfing on the North Coast. In order to improve the surfing environment at Jhongjiao Bay and to promote tourism on the North Coast, and also taking into consideration that surfing will be included as a sport in the 2020 Summer Olympics in Tokyo, Jhongjiao Bay is now being developed into an international base for training surfing talent. For this purpose, the Jhongjiao Bay International Surfing Base has been established close to the beach.

Nearby Places of Interest

① Tiaoshi Coast

Gravel spat out from Mt. Datun during volcanic activity tens of thousands of years ago and rocks from land collapses were formed into a stretch of coast with a unique appearance by the rolling action of the waves. In earlier times, locals had to wait for low tide before jumping across the gravel, therefore, this stretch of coast was named "Tiaoshi Coast" (jump-stone coast).

② Juming Museum

This museum was established by renowned sculptor Ju Ming. It has an extensive outdoor exhibition area where the works of the master can be viewed close up. The museum is a place where visitors can get close to art and also relax mentally.

③ Shitoushan Park/Twin Candlestick Islets

Once a military fortification, this park is now a great spot for viewing beautiful scenery, attracting many visitors. It retains the original natural ecology, coastal landscape, and remains of pillboxes. From here, Jinshan's landmark, the Twin Candlestick Islets can be clearly seen protruding from the sea to the north.

④ Jinshan Old Street

Once called Jinbaoli Old Street, this street preserves the marks of its heyday. Many local snacks are available here, with duck meat and ice treats among the most popular. Sweet potato, Taiwanese rice crispy, and egg rolls are local special products that are popular gifts.

⑤ Jinshan-Wanli Hot-Spring Area

Part of the Mt. Datun geothermal zone, the hot springs here were developed during the Japanese colonial period. The area is naturally blessed with four types of springs: undersea hot spring, sulfur spring, carbonated spring, and iron spring. Enjoying a soak in a hot-spring pool while taking in the sea views is a highly pleasurable experience.

Fine Food/Gift Options

Jinshan Duck Meat

Jinshan Duck Meat has been in business for almost 60 years on Jinbaoli Old Street. The duck meat restaurant is self-service and offers freshly-cut duck meat and stir-fried dishes.

Wanli Crabs

"Wanli Crabs" refers to the Blue, Three-spotted and Swimming crabs caught in the waters off Wanli that are used to supply almost 80% of the crab market in Taiwan. A Wanli crab promotion event is held every autumn at Guihou Fishing Harbor.

Jinshan Sweet Potato

Jinshan produces excellent sweet potatoes. The peak season is July-September, when the Jinshan Sweet Potato Festival is held. Visitors are welcome to have fun digging their own sweet potatoes on local farms.

Jinshan Malao

Malao rice crispy is a well-known gift item of Jinbaoli Old Street. It is made by steaming ground rice or taro, coating it in ground glutinous rice and then deep frying. The delicious balls, crispy on the outside, hollow on the inside, are then coated with maltose, peanut, and sesame.
